Sheriff investigates house-buy forgery

By TAMARA GRIPPI

AN ESTRANGED husband reportedly committed a serious crime in Carmel so he could make sure his wife could have no claim to the house he was buying. The man found a woman willing to impersonate his wife and sign away all her rights to the property, according to a complaint filed with the Monterey County Sheriff's Department.

The Pine Cone is not releasing the names in the case, because formal charges have not yet been filed.

The husband reportedly went so far as to commit the forgery in the presence of a notary public at Old Republic Title in Carmel Jan. 29. Notaries normally require people to produce proof of identity when signing official papers, said Deputy Chad Rothwell of

CHAIN STORE ALERT

Shop owners worried about Longs Drugs

By KIRSTIE WILDE

THE PROSPECT of the giant Longs Drug Store chain opening a store in Carmel has local business people and residents upset. At the Mayor's Breakfast April 14, Nielsen Bros. Market owner Merv Sutton learned that Longs is negotiating to move into the vacant bank building on the corner of Dolores and 7th Avenue, and may want to expand the building from 6,000 square feet to 9,000.

"A Longs would devastate at least six long-time businesses in Carmel, including our market," Sutton told The Pine Cone. "We've been here 68 years, but a store like Longs — that sells everything from groceries to toilet paper to pet food to booze — would hurt us in a great way."

The president of Longs, Steve Roath, said in a telephone

CARMEL INNOVATION: RECYCLE SLUDGE FAR, FAR AWAY

By TAMARA GRIPPI

THE CARMEL Area Wastewater District (CAWD) has come up with an innovative way to stop dumping sewage sludge at the landfill and save money at the same time: Send the solid waste south to the San Joaquin Valley to be used as fertilizer.

But so far, CAWD's home county is having none of it. Even with the creative terms invented to make treated sewage sludge less off-putting ("biosolids" is a favorite) Monterey County will not allow it to be used as fertilizer here.

So the wastewater district has been shipping two truck trailers of biosolids every week down to the McCarthy Family Farms in the San Joaquin Valley.

While the district originally signed on with the farm recycling program to avoid fee hikes at the landfill, officials are also under pressure to reduce solid waste at the dump.

"We're proud of the fact that we're also being environmentally sensitive," said Brian Congleton, president of the district's board of directors. "It's nice to see biosolids being used."

The district pays the McCarthy Farms $28 a ton to dispose of the treated sludge, according to Craig Justice, the chief operator at the plant who manages the biosolids program.

While similar solid waste recycling projects have been going on for decades elsewhere — with some dating back as early as the 1920s — the state of California began requiring permits in just the last decade, according to Lauren Fondahl, biosolids coordinator with the Environmental Protection Agency.

Stupendous amount of sludge

The Carmel waste water treatment plant receives 1.8 million gallons of sewage every day from just Carmel and the Del Monte Forest, according to plant superintendent Mark Scheiter. The biosolids — "pure crap," he said candidly — are then separated from the water through a filtering system.

Sixty marathons in nine years — 'No big deal'

By MARY BROWNFIELD

PHILO SHORT doesn't mean to wave his own flag. Rather, his message is that if he can do it, anyone can.

The upcoming Big Sur International Marathon will be his 60th, but don't think he chalked up those runs over several decades. No, Short entered his first marathon ever — the Big Sur — in 1990. His previous serious running run-ins consisted of one season of track in his senior year of high school.

This year, Short intends to have run 61 marathons by the time his 61st birthday rolls around in June. When he runs Big Sur, his bib number will be, appropriately, 60.

TINY POETS ON PARADE

PATTY WILSON'S Carmel River School kindergarten class wowed parents at a "Poets on Parade" Tuesday evening program this week. The 17 tots stepped to the microphone to recite by heart a favorite Mother Goose rhyme. One student, Alban Harrison, wrote his own poem. Wilson said the program helped the children in developing self-confidence through familiarity with classic poetry, learning to memorize, developing ease in speaking before a large group and becoming microphone friendly.

Council adds two to the payroll

By TAMARA GRIPPI

THE CARMEL City Council created two new city jobs — an accountant and an office supervisor — at its April 6 council meeting.

The council also changed the role of personnel officer to a non-managerial role. After Jerry Pullen retires July 1 as city personnel officer, Carmel plans to turn his job into a technical position to save money.

The council unanimously approved the changes after meeting in closed session.

The office supervisor would earn $36,200 a year while the accountant would make $46,300 a year, according to Carmel City Administrator Jere Kersnar. Funds to pay them will come out of next year's budget, Kersnar said.

By reducing the personnel officer position to "personnel specialist," the city will save money. While Pullen currently makes $72,000 a year, his replacement will make only $42,000. His employment law duties will be contracted out to a private attorney.

The new accountant position is necessary because the city is moving from a simple cash-basis accounting system to the more complicated "modified accrual" system. "Auditors have been making that recommendation every year for some years," Kersnar said.

If the council approves the new accountant, Kersnar will begin the recruitment process after next year's budget is completed.

However, Kersnar said he has not yet decided whether to hire an office supervisor. "I asked the council to create the position and then allow me to decide whether to fill it or not," he said.

the Monterey County Sheriff's Department.

The wife-impersonator allegedly produced a "green card" (identification for legal aliens) with a picture that resembled her when she signed the "quit claim" deed, which would have signed away any claims the real wife could have on the house, Rothwell said.

However, when Rothwell asked a witness at Old Republic to describe the woman who signed the papers, she appeared to be "a completely different person (than the wife)," Rothwell said, adding "It could have been a phony green card."

The couple was in the process of getting a divorce. And ironically, the wife did-not want to have anything to do with the house, Rothwell said. "She was only upset that he did this without her permission," he said.

SLUDGE

The plant uses a series of steps to remove the pathogens and "purify" the sludge. At the end of the process the solid waste is heated in a tank at 100 degrees Fahrenheit for 30 days before it is "compacted" and sent to the farm.

Each year, about 800 acre-feet of treated water goes to the golf courses in Pebble Beach while the remaining 600 acre-feet returns to the ocean.

McCarthy Farms makes use of biosolids from counties and jurisdictions all over California, including the City of Los Angeles and the East Bay.

The farms use 20 "wet tons" per acre on their 25,000 acres once a year, according to William Skinner, general manager of the farms. While the McCarthy Farms grow mainly non-food crops — cotton and alfalfa — other farms use the treated waste on crops grown for human consumption.

However, since the material coming from Carmel only qualifies as "class B" — waste which hasn't been put through higher levels of processing — the farms have to compost the sludge with agricultural waste before it can be used, according to Skinner.

The McCarthy Farms use the biosolids to supplement their marginal soils. "We can cut down on the chemical fertilizers," Skinner said.

A long haul

Congleton says the only downside from his perspective is the distance (about 120 miles) between Carmel and McCarthy Farms; "which is burning fuel and increasing the cost of using this as disposal."

CAWD has no choice, though, because local health officials have refused to allow sludge fertilizer here, and citizens aren't exactly clamoring for them to change their minds.

Walter Wong, the county's director of Environmental Health, told The Pine Cone that he doesn't want to sanction treated waste on food crops until a state study can look at the long-term effects.

"When we decided to use waste water (for food crops) we did a 10 year, $7 million study," Wong said. "With biosolids, that hasn't been done."

Wong is particularly concerned about testing for E-coli bacteria and looking at the cumulative effects on the soil.

> 'We can cut down on the chemical fertilizers.'
> — William Skinner
> McCarthy Farms

"There are no documented cases of real environmental problems where biosolids were applied correctly," Fondahl said. The EPA has, however, received nuisance reports of stinky smells.

Wong says he's not opposed to using treated waste on non-food crops. However, Wong pointed out, local protests have so far squelched any such fertilizing programs.

Police & Sheriff's Log

Gas leak evacuates the neighborhood

HERE'S A look at some of the significant calls logged by the Carmel-by-the-Sea Police Department and the Monterey County Sheriff's Department last week.

SUNDAY, APRIL 4

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of a tree down. Officer located a tree which was overgrown. Tree did not fall and was not blocking the road or driveway.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Residential facility reported female resident had walked away. She was located two houses away from her past residence at Santa Fe and Fifth. She was returned to facility and entered into Alzheimer's book.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Unfounded report of a burglary in progress. Father of reporting party had been away approximately one year. They both came back to live in the house again.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of someone knocking at the front door of a San Antonio residence at 4 a.m. An area check was negative.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: '90 Cadillac towed after being found blocking the driveway to a residence on Lincoln.

Carmel Valley: Driver on Carmel Valley Road and Cañada Way stopped for speeding. The driver was found to be under the influence of alcohol and turned over to CHP.

MONDAY, APRIL 5

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Four speeding tickets issued on Rio Road, two on Second and Santa Fe.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Woman reported being harassed.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Person called station to report store owner who continues to demand payment for an item the person says he did not purchase.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Backed up Carmel Fire Department on a dryer fire at the Pine Inn.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Person reported that he was recently hospitalized after a fall that broke his neck. He discovered some personal items missing from his home: false teeth, eyeglasses, a painting, a cordless phone and a pair of dirty pants. Person is unsure of the location of his belongings due to numerous friends of his being at the residence while he was in the hospital. The landlord may have moved the items due to the residence being for lease.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Lost tourist escorted to inn at Second and Carpenter.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: '95 Nissan was seen driving on Sixth Avenue. with the license plate covered. Driver was unable to provide a driver's license and a records check confirmed the driver was never issued a license. Driver cited and vehicle towed.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Carmel Valley man found tote back with clothing on Carmel Beach near Del Mar restrooms and turned same into police.

STORY & DIGITAL PHOTO BY MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

SIERRA SOBILO, 5, may look like a miniature Rottweiler, but in truth, she's an Entelbucher Sennenhund, smallest of the Swiss mountain dogs and a relative of the Bernese Mountain dog.

You would have guessed Entelbucher Sennenhund right away had her white lower chest blaze been in view as she rests between fetch bouts on Carmel Beach – a dead giveaway to Entelbucher Sennenhund aficionados.

To continue Sierra's saga: She was rescued from a shelter by her mom, Barbara, in the ninth hour as Sierra entered her sixth week of shelter residency – and we all know what that means.

So grateful was Sierra to be given a last minute reprieve, she fell in love with her new mom on the way home. But when they entered the house and Sierra was introduced to Tigger – Mom's long-time cat companion – Sierra was seriously threatened.

Sibling rivalry came into play: Sierra ate Tigger's food; stole Tigger's toys; chewed the toys to pieces and slyly left the remnants where Tigger would find them; and then – the ultimate overt maneuver – she actually sat on Tigger.

Compassionate Tigger seemed to understand Sierra's desperate need for acceptance, and fell in love with her – no matter how insidious Sierra's schemes.

Now sibling love has won out and the two Sobilos play together happily with Tigger's replacement toys and even curl up together for a comfy snooze.

Your water allowance -- and how much you pay for water -- depends on a survey being mailed to Cal-Am water customers.

In response to state-imposed water restrictions, the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District developed a new water conservation plan.

It requires that Cal-Am develop new rates that provide a fair amount of water to each person and business at a basic rate.

Protect Your Best Water Rate

As a water customer, you will receive a survey which will be used to set the rate and water allowance for your home or business.

Thank you for your cooperation as we work to deliver you a secure water supply under state-imposed restrictions.

The best way to get your fair share of water -- and a fair rate for your water -- is to promptly return this questionnaire.

Watch for wet, moving, biting, dropping hazards in Carmel

What a Payne

By Bob Payne

WE ARE a well-meaning species, ready to help our non-mammalian friends in need. I must say, however, that we humans don't always drive around with a topped-off mental tank.

You no doubt read about the young foundering salmon shark, stranded on Carmel Beach a week or so ago. Already drowning from prolonged exposure to air, its plight worsened when a man stupidly lifted it out of the water, perhaps to administer mouth-to-gill resuscitation. The only other explanation I can think of is simple, morbid curiosity. Had this shark lifter been convicted, mandatory psychiatric counseling should have been imposed. Those eager for an up-close-and-personal look should count themselves lucky to survive the experience. ("Hey, look, Betty Sue! This here pointy-toothed fish ain't got no scal... Arghhh!!!!")

If shark man-handling weren't enough to keep the letters to the editor flowing, note that we have precious few regulations to control our falling bark crisis. Famous for their messy habit of shedding strips of bark, Carmel's eucalyptus trees are the shallow-rooted rats of the arboreal set. In brief, one Pine Cone reader suggested tree diapers to contain this bough movement crisis.

Personally, I think that's barking up the wrong tree. You'd never get it past the city council. A study would be needed. Some would complain on esthetic grounds; others on limitations to express themselves with dressed-up pants and pastel colors on the stalwart trunks.

A eucalyptus is unfortunately a slow learner. What we need is to scrape up funds in the budget to hire a good tree psychologist — someone who's patient and firmly rooted in the ground — to guide our errant trees toward the necessary potty training that they should have learned as potted saplings in the nursery.

Then there are the newts, and I'm not talking about the family of the former Speaker of the House. These slimy salamanders have started risking life and limb to cross Carmel Valley Road on rainy nights, driven by the primal urge to "get to the other side." Actually, biologists claim it's to get to the pond to breed in the spring.

With 100 or so dying each damp night, a motorist sign has been posted to "avoid the newts" when road is wet. "I Brake for Newts," is my newest bumper sticker. However, because of my poor night vision, I usually find myself braking every 30 yards or so for small, wet rocks. Tailgate at your own risk.

Some say the preferred fix is to construct a tiny, six-inch tunnel embedded under the road, but that will never do. Caltrans would never fund the $50,000 cost. The cost of designing and building the miniature drilling tools alone would be prohibitive. If it would work, a good three-inch pipe across the road with metal straps on each end would do the job just as well at a fraction of the cost. But the real problem is getting these critters to use the tunnel. What are we going to do, pass out leaflets?

A hundred dinky slingshots would be a vastly cheaper and faster fix. We can plant them on the left side of the road and bait a pressure-sensitive seat to catapult the unsuspecting newt once it walks onto the seat. My vision, which I'm sure you share, is one drizzly night to drive up Carmel Valley Road and, through my bright-beamed headlight, gaze upon streaking spotted orange slime shooting over the roadway like a horde of gleaming, bug-eyed locusts. On that night, my friends, I will shriek out with pride to no one in particular, "That was my idea!"

But my pride goeth before the fall. I have not yet solved the crash-landing problem, and the rude shock of ballistically hurtling through the air cannot be underestimated. I just cannot say how these trauma will affect their mood to mate, and I don't want to get caught in the mating blame. So, until we come up with a better idea, please watch for wet, moving rocks.

Having been advised by friends, spouse and the Pine Cone alike not to quit his day job, Robert Payne is a partner in the Monterey intellectual property law firm of La-Riviere, Grubman & Payne, LLP.

LONGS

interview with The Pine Cone that his company has "looked at several sites in Carmel over the years" and that "if in fact we take a run at this or any other site, it will be done with the idea, 'What do you want your city to look like and can we fit in that mold?'"

After the Mayor's breakfast, Sutton spoke to the owners of Bruno's market, Carmel Drug Store, Surf and Sand, Ron's Liquors and Carmel Camera as well as leaders of the Carmel Residents Association (CRA), and said they are "up in arms" about the idea of another chain store coming to town. They are hoping to convince the new owners of the building, Steven and Suzanne Diamond of Carmel and Greg Tomlinson of Santa Clara, not to make a deal with Longs. "We're going to write letters and circulate petitions," Sutton said. CRA President Suzanne Paboojian immediately asked the Carmel Planning Commission about how to get an "urgency ordinance to the city council that would prohibit chain stores that already have a store within X number of miles."

The John Mandurrago-designed Fleur de Ville across the street from the vacant bank building won raves last year for the creative way it replaced the large Village Theater building.

'Totally premature'

Suzanne Diamond told The Pine Cone the chain store worries are "totally premature." She said the rumors about an "imminent deal" with Longs are absolutely not true, and any decision on leasing the building is probably several months away.

Diamond said Longs was the first of a long list of prospective tenants to "put something in writing" — a list which includes Williams Sonoma/Pottery Barn, Crate and Barrel, Abercrombie & Fitch, Shabby Chic and Restoration Hardware. She said the list does not include Wal-Mart, another rumor floating around Carmel.

But Roath said no written offer for the property has been made. "It hasn't even been considered by our real estate committee," he said.

He added that he "loves Carmel" and that he and his wife visit the town every year. "I think that the citizens of Carmel should hold very dearly to their expectations and their vision for that city," Roath said. "We absolutely respect the desire of the city to maintain its character and it is not our wish to violate that in any way. If we make a proposal but they don't want us in there, well, they're the ones who get to decide."

Ted Plant, the leasing agent in San Francisco, told The Pine Cone that "literally a half-dozen other tenants have expressed interest in the property, including art galleries and antique stores. Longs is just one of them."

Diamond, who has owned property in Carmel for 20 years, was sympathetic to the concerns of her neighbors. "I'm personally not in favor of a chain, but you know this is a big building and it needs a tenant that can use such a space."

Diamond said she would prefer a group of smaller shops that would serve residents. "I would love to have a pet boutique in Carmel, but not Petland!" she said. "Personally I'm with everybody in town about chain stores; I'd love something unique and wonderful. But what if they don't make an offer?" The building has been vacant since last year when Great Western Bank moved out. The purchase price was $2.2 million, according to county records.

'Top 10' drug chain

Longs Drugs has more than 380 stores and 19,000 employees in California, Hawaii, Nevada, Colorado, Washington and Oregon, and calls itself "One of the top 10 drug chains in the nation." The chain had sales of $3.27 billion last year, with a 26 percent profit margin that added up to $63.4 million. The CEO is Bob Long, descendant of Tom and Joe Long, who founded the company in 1938.

If a Longs does move into the vacant building in Carmel, it probably won't be the standard "shopping mall" variety, according to Diamond. "It won't have big neon signs, of course," she said. "There is a new concept in the Bay Area, kind of a 'Longs boutique' that sells more upscale products. I think it would be more like that."

Ready for a fight

A proposal to put a Longs — boutique or otherwise— in Carmel will surely cause a major controversy. "We don't want another fight, but we are certainly ready if it's necessary," said Kati Lewis, who owns La Boheme restaurant, across the intersection from the vacant building.

Marjorie Timmins, a resident since 1936, said "This cannot happen; this must not happen; this will not happen. I hope that business people and residents will unite in opposition to this unthinkable prospect."

Mayor Ken White said a proposal to open a large drug store at that location would "raise plenty of concerns," including signage, lighting, parking and impacts on nearby apartment buildings. "But the main thing," White said, "will be whether such a plan would be consistent with our general plan, which requires a balance of uses in the commercial district."

The property consists of four lots and is zoned "service-commercial."

Diamond told The Pine Cone not everyone is against Longs. "At least three people said to me, after they got over the initial shock, 'Really, in Carmel? Hmmm, that would be convenient.'

"Others have said, 'Don't feel intimidated; you have every right to get the best offer that you can," she said.

Caltrans will make improvements, Keeley says

By PAUL MILLER

AFTER A brainstorming session with Caltrans April 9th, Assemblyman Fred Keeley and Supervisor Dave Potter said they are optimistic that Caltrans will soon make improvements to Highway 1 to relieve the traffic congestion that has plagued the highway and Carmel Valley Road for years.

"In the short term, and by that I mean within the next 24 months, Caltrans has recommitted itself to the 12 operational improvements that have been on the drawing boards for some time," Keeley said. "These improvements will alleviate much of the current congestion. And they are fully funded," he said.

Potter agreed that Caltrans officials had a new attitude about the existing Highway 1 corridor.

"Jay Walter (Caltrans district director) had a very positive approach about moving forward with the improvements as soon as possible," Potter said.

Two of the improvements will be built within the next year, Potter Avenue: a park and ride lot at the northeast corner of Ocean Avenue and Highway 1, and a second right turn lane from Carmel Valley Road to northbound Highway 1.

According to Keeley, eight other improvements will first have to undergo an environmental analysis before being submitted to the county for permits. These include:

- an additional northbound climbing lane between Carmel Valley Road and Morse Drive
- a left-turn lane from northbound Highway 1 to westbound Handley Drive and a third northbound through lane from Handley Drive to Highway 68
- an extended right turn lane southbound to westbound Ocean Avenue
- more storage area for eastbound traffic at Carpenter Street
- a second westbound through lane where Rio Road crosses Highway 1
- a new right-turn lane on eastbound Ocean Avenue to southbound Highway 1, and a a longer lane-reduction area southbound south of Ocean Avenue.

According to Keeley, "When the Hatton Canyon freeway was a possibility, Caltrans had little inducement to carry out these important improvements. Now they can focus on these necessary improvements while long-term solutions are vetted."

Last month, the Transportation Agency for Monterey County voted to pull the funding for the 40-year-old Hatton Canyon project. That money will instead go to the Highway 101 Prunedale Bypass in North Monterey County.

Money for the improvements to Highway 1 will come from the State Highway Operations and Protection Programs fund, said county traffic expert Deetta Nicely.

Lawsuit will be pursued

Proponents of the Hatton Canyon freeway sued Caltrans in 1995 over the plan to improve Highway 1. An attorney for the group. Christine Gianascol, said the suit demanded an EIR for the whole program of improvements, "and we will continue to pursue the suit on that basis."

"These improvements will provide minimal traffic relief and will have an enormous impact on esthetics," she said. "We are especially concerned about the impact on homes on Highway 1, and about a 600-foot retaining wall and a 300-foot sound wall which would be built along the highway just south of Morse Drive," Gianascol added.

Carmel Rite Aid closing its doors

By MARY BROWNFIELD

RESIDENTS OF Carmel Valley's senior residences and convalescent homes will have to find a new pharmacy after May 15. The Rite Aid in Carmel Rancho Center, the only pharmacy in the valley that delivered, is closing. Deliveries ceased April 1.

According to Rite Aid corporate spokesperson Allison Costello, all of Rite Aid's prescriptions will be transferred to Longs, located in the Crossroads. But Longs does not deliver.

Which is why a long-time local, independently owned pharmacy in Monterey, Ordway, has pitched delivery services to a potential customer base 10 miles away from its Alvarado Street location. Howard Pearson, general manager of Ordway, said it is no secret the 96-year-old pharmacy is soliciting business from the four senior residential facilities in the Valley.

"Our main concern is with people in the Valley because Rite Aid was the only pharmacy that delivered," Pearson said. "We want to work out something where we can deliver to these people."

Two Carmel pharmacies, Surf and Sand and Carmel Drug Store, told The Pine Cone that they also deliver to the Valley.

Pearson recently spoke to a group of more than 60 residents at Pacific Meadows, many of whom did not know Rite Aid was closing, according to a resident who spoke to The Pine Cone.

Pearson claimed many residents unknowingly pay more than they should for prescription drugs at chain stores because they mistakenly believe chain stores are cheaper.

"It hurts me to see these people paying that much money for prescription drugs," said Pearson, a 40-year veteran of the business. "If we can save them $80 or $100 month in prescriptions, then that's money they can spend wisely somewhere else."

'Smaller stores are more health care oriented and are not in the business of selling tuna fish and paper airplanes. But I guess the narrow profit margins are beginning to affect the larger drugstores . . .'

— Dana Gordon

Independents declining

Although it is a chain store, Rite Aid's demise so soon after the Pebble Beach pharmacy closed its doors indicates a long-term trend, according to Pearson. He said there were 29 independent drug stores on the Monterey Peninsula when he moved here in 1969. "Now there are five," he said. "The little store can't compete with the chains."

Dana Gordon, who owns and runs Pacific Grove's Central Avenue Pharmacy, said the fact that a chain has been forced to close one if its locations is indicative of the lack of money in the industry. "The profit margins in this industry are very narrow, if not nonexistent, for everyone — both chains and independents," he said. "Particularly pressured are the independents, because we cannot operate on as narrow a margin."

Chains use their pharmacies to attract customers to other merchandise, which is where those stores make their money, Gordon said. "Smaller stores are more health care oriented and are not in the business of selling tuna fish and paper airplanes." he said. "But I guess the narrow profit margins are beginning to affect the larger drugstores now."

Ingenuity will always enable some small drug stores to survive, according to Pearson. He said the few survivors are still here because they were smart enough to provide special services like prescription delivery.

Enjoy full Life Care retirement living in beautiful Pacific Grove.

Retirement living hasn't slowed down Don and Irene Slaiter. Both say they're as active today as they were during their careers. As volunteer docents for Bay Net, they support their love of marine life on the Monterey Peninsula and share their knowledge with others at Coast Guard Pier and Lover's Point near their home at Canterbury Woods.

Don and Irene also find the time and energy to be certified American Red Cross volunteers. When not volunteering, Don takes golf lessons and enjoys line dancing with Irene and other Canterbury Woods residents.

"We're so lucky," says Irene, "and so happy to be living here in comfort with so many other active and interesting people. We feel secure in knowing that at our home at Canterbury Woods we're guaranteed comprehensive lifetime medical care."

I'm sorry, PG&E

I NEVER thought I'd be apologizing to PG&E, but I am.

During the power outage on that very windy Saturday two weeks ago, I came to wish I'd put their number on speed-dial. I phoned their "outage information" line at 4 p.m. and, pressing the right numbers, reported that our lights were out. At 6 p.m. I dialed the same number only to hear that there were outages in Pebble Beach, but our little corner of Carmel was not listed. So I once again "reported" that we were dark.

Out came the battery-operated lanterns and the little tea candles. (The latter are so much safer than tall candles which can be knocked over, and the tea candles last six hours or more.) Fortunately, we have a gas stove, a fireplace — and a fire-retardant roof. We had dinner, listened to our small portable radio to see what the storm was doing elsewhere.

By 8 p.m. I could no longer read by the lantern light and, yes, we were bored. I phoned PG&E's information line again; they still had no record of our outage. It didn't help that across the street our neighbors' power was back on, and kitty-korner from us, a motel's lights were blazing.

Urged on

Urged on by the man of the house who is good at urging me on, and who rarely makes such calls himself, I dialed PG&E again. It was now 9 o'clock. This time I pressed the digit for "emergency," quickly admitting to the answering voice that it was not an emergency. A kindly gentleman (trained, no doubt, in a preschool) explained that we are on a different "grid" from the neighbors across the street, and the motel. I didn't understand his reason for our outage not being listed, but his patience with me was admirable. He listened quietly when I complained that "we're always the last to be turned on." (Now there's a straight line he could have had some fun with.)

By the time we'd finished talking, I was feeling very guilty for having called. After reading the next day's paper which reported a child's death and heavy property losses, I felt like a whiny brat!

Which is why I'm apologizing today to PG&E. However, I'm still going to put them on speed-dial. Relatives in Southern California tell me they can't remember the last time they had a power outage. Earthquakes, yes, but power outages, never.

EEEEKMAIL

It's now official. There are more people on the internet than off. Hard to believe when you live in Carmel, where every other house looks like it belongs to Snow White.

I succumbed a couple of years ago, but surrendered only recently, the difference being that in my early days on the net I checked for e-mail every three or four days. Now I check every day, morning and night. It's as if there's a large hungry dog in the den, waiting to be fed — hard to ignore.

Even when the computer is turned off, it's like a phone with a silent ring. Or a shirt that needs a button sewed on, and just lies there. It wears on you.

Friends and relatives who in the past were patient are now wise to me. Ignoring their e-mail messages offends them more than having their phone calls screened by my answering machine. In this day of high-speed communication, I find myself dragging my feet. I really don't want to spend hours sitting at the computer. I'd much rather be out in the garden, nagging the flowers.

As for those who swear they'll never use a computer, I have one word: microwave. When I moved to the Peninsula 14 years ago, there was a special store that sold only microwave ovens, and classes to teach you how to use them.

Need I say more?

OPINION

Editorial

Don't look to Washington for water solutions

THIS WEEK'S pronouncement by a Washington, D.C., anti-dam group that the Carmel River is the "eighth most endangered river" in America provided some humorous lessons in the pitfalls of analyzing local problems from a distance of 2,500 miles, and some sobering reminders about this community's batting average — zero — when it comes to solving its water problems.

The "American Rivers" report — disguised as an analysis of the environmental problems of the Carmel River and purporting to recommend steps for restoring the health of the river — is actually a polemic against building a new dam on the upper reaches of the river, and even calls for the removal of the existing San Clemente Dam.

It is certainly not news to anyone in these parts that the Carmel River is in trouble. Except in the wettest years, the lower reaches of the river are bone-dry during summer months. From 1990 to 1995 the river never reached the ocean at all, seriously disrupting the life cycle of the river's once-copious steelhead and killing riparian vegetation. During the next drought, the same thing will happen again.

But the American Rivers report doesn't help solve that problem when it opines that the "Monterey Peninsula is an area with one of the highest population growth rates in the state of California" — a statement which is patently absurd and which completely misses the point.

The river is dry not because of the people who might live in Carmel and its neighboring communities but because of the people who already live here. Monterey Peninsula residents have excelled at water conservation and are using 20 percent less water per capita than they did in the 1980s. Total Cal-Am pumping from the Carmel River is much less than it was ten years ago. But the river is still seriously depleted and would stay that way even if this area's slow population growth were brought to a complete standstill.

And that is why some of this area's most ardent environmentalists support a new dam on the upper reaches of the Carmel River. They want the river flow restored for the benefit of its flora and fauna and see a new dam as the most cost-effective and possibly the only feasible way to restore the river's health.

Opposition to the dam comes mainly from people who believe that a major new water source would foster rapid population growth — and that preventing such growth is more important than restoring the river's flow.

As long as the river is dry, their reasoning goes, development will be hindered.

These two opposing camps have, unfortunately, produced a decade-long standstill which leaves us with an inadequate water supply and with a dry river.

American Rivers has mainly concerned itself with rivers like the Columbia, the Snake and the Missouri — great waterways which have been tamed with dozens of dams, canals, concrete channels and the like. Their error-filled report on the Carmel River provides little insight, no solutions and shows that the group hasn't seriously considered the unique environmental issues raised by a river which, because of human consumption, dries up nearly every year.

Letters to the Editor

The Pine Cone encourages submission of letters which address issues of public importance. The Pine Cone will not edit letters but reserves the right to determine which letters are suitable for publication. Letters should not exceed 350 words, and must include the author's signature, name, telephone number and street address. Please do not send us letters which have been submitted to other newspapers.

The Pine Cone is no longer able to accept letters-to-the-editor by fax. Please submit your letters by U.S. mail, e-mail, or in person (addresses are provided below).

Massive mega monstrous fib

Dear Editor:

The battle of the Hatton Canyon Freeway is now over. However, there is a correction to be made in reference to a letter in the April 9 Pine Cone which was submitted by Joyce Stevens.

She referred to the planned highway as a "massive mega monstrous freeway." She has also, in the past, called it a massive Los Angeles type of freeway. I should like to take this opportunity to provide Mrs. Stevens with some basic education (tuition-free).

The massive mega monstrous Los Angeles type of freeway has four, five and six lanes going in each direction. The proposed Hatton Canyon Freeway was simply an extension of the Highway 1 Freeway which has two lanes in each direction. There is a difference, isn't there?

It is interesting to note that neither the Highway 1 Freeway from Castroville to Carmel Hill nor any portion of it has been described as a massive mega monstrous freeway. How then could the Hatton Canyon Freeway be truthfully described as such?

End of tuition-free lesson.

P. B. plan 'reasonable'

Dear Editor:

In the heat of land use battles, fairness all too often becomes a casualty. Passions run high, with reason and balance giving way to ends-justify-the-means tactics. The emerging partisanship surrounding the Pebble Beach Company's proposed final residential development plans for the Del Monte Forest once again suggests that the process could benefit if fairness and reasonableness were kept in mind.

Is the Pebble Beach Company hoping to

City Talk

By KEN WHITE
Mayor, Carmel-by-the-Sea

THE HISTORIC design character of Carmel contributes to a quality of life and value of property that are truly unique. Remarkable commercial buildings and homes remain from Carmel's early days. These buildings have much to teach us about how Carmel came to be and who helped create this magical place we call home.

In 1993 the city took steps to preserve our heritage by adopting a voluntary historic preservation program. Locally important buildings were identified and an ordinance was adopted to encourage owners to preserve these resources. The ordinance only applies to voluntarily designated resources. It requires special review of exterior alterations and allows proposed demolitions to be delayed for up to a year while preservation options are explored.

Carmel is not alone in this effort. Many cities throughout the state and nation have adopted a variety of programs to protect historic resources. Indeed, in this state, the California Environmental Quality Act recognizes historic buildings as environmental resources and, because of this recognition, demolishing or substantially altering historic resources requires preparation of an Environmental Impact Report.

Over the past several months it has become increasingly clear that conflicts exist between the city's General Plan, its historic preservation ordinance and state law. There also appears to be broad disagreement over whether the city's list of historic resources is correct. As a result of these conflicts each demolition or alteration of an older building faces uncertainty about its historic status and whether a costly and time-consuming environmental review will be required. This undermines the voluntary nature of the city's program and opens the door to local challenges as well.

Under the status quo each project is reviewed in isolation and must bear the cost and time delay of review separately. A better way to address these issues is through an open, citywide process that allows citizens, property owners and affected professionals to participate. The proposed urgency ordinance that was defeated at the last city council meeting would have temporarily halted demolitions and alterations of older buildings while a citywide review of historic preservation was completed. Most speakers at the public hearing opposed this and the ordinance was defeated.

As a result it is likely that both types of review will occur simultaneously. Private development projects will bear the cost and delay of individual project reviews, including environmental impact reports when needed. Meanwhile, the city will undertake a comprehensive review of historic buildings throughout the city so that conflicting provisions in our General Plan and historic preservation ordinance can be resolved. In the future, once a comprehensive citywide review is completed, most individual project reviews can be avoided.

He coordinated physical and massage therapists who donated treatment services to the runners. Finally, he decided to enter the competition, and did The Walk in 1989. He was hooked.

"Then my really good friend and attorney, Robert Wellington, who'd run every one, said, 'Let's train.' So I trained with him and Big Sur was my first marathon" he said. "He got tired at Highlands Inn, and I kept going," he recalls. They met up later at the finish line.

And Short, a Skyline Forest resident, has been running marathons ever since. He has competed all over the country, finishing high in his age group numerous times. 1999 will be the fourth year in a row that he runs back-to-back the Boston Marathon, the oldest continually running marathon in the world (1996 marked its 100th anniversary), and the Big Sur Marathon. Boston will be run April 19; Big Sur on the 25th.

Last year, Short ran four marathons in 36 days, just to see if he could do it.

"I'm not fast — I don't have speed — I have endurance," he said. "I'm not unique."

Short said success in any endeavor requires a list of p-words: positive thinking, patience, practice, perseverance, perspiration, pain and prayer. "These are keys for life, not just for a marathon."

Big Sur is the best

Of all the marathons Short has run, he said Big Sur is his favorite. He spends the early hours of his Sundays running parts of the route along Highway 1, when traffic is minimal.

"Big Sur is just so beautiful. I always see new things," he said. "It's almost a religious experience, with the natural beauty and the peace and quiet."

The route, which has been subjected to some changes since El Niño ravaged the coast last year, is at the upper edge of moderate difficulty, according to "The Ultimate Guide to Marathons." The guide rates it the best "destination" marathon, awarding it top scores for scenic beauty and organization of any marathon in the country.

'It's something that any older person can do. You only need a pair of shoes.'

— Philo Short

"The most beautiful part is the toughest part," Short said. "It's like being on top of the world — you can see everything."

The marathon, limited to roughly 3,000 participants, sold out particularly early this year — Feb. 22, according to Race Director Wally Kastner. "We had never sold out before race weekend," he said. The 21-mile walk and the relay are also sold-out, but the 10-mile walk and the 5K run are still open for enrollment. Runners for next year are encouraged to enroll by Jan. 1, 2000, Kastner said.

Not an advocate for marathoners

Short said his achievements are not beyond the grasp of anyone, and he does not set out to recruit people into running marathons. Running, and the camaraderie and lack of boundaries between those who run, are what are important, he said, not the distance. "It's something that any older person can do," he said. "You only need a pair of shoes."

And you don't need to run 100 miles a week to train, either, according to Short, who runs three times a week. He said he usually runs around 10 miles on Tuesday, about eight on Thursday, and a long run on Sundays. Short said some people might disagree with his training schedule, but he simply does what works for him. "I've developed my own schedule," he said. "Like shoes, you make them fit. You have to tailor everything to yourself."

As for running the race, Short has another adage he also applies to life in general: "It's running one mile 26 times, not 26 miles once," he said. "The fact that you do it all is the thing that counts."

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

Max Frankel earned the respect of fellow journalists for the standards he set as longtime editorial chief of The New York Times. Now retired, he writes essays for The Times. In one, he criticized the news media for a warped view of the aged. "With the conspicuous exception of the septuagenarian geniuses at '60 Minutes,' he wrote, "old-timers have been virtually banished from the news media. And that causes serious neglect of the needs and attributes of the elderly." Young reporters, editors and TV executives underestimate the health and wealth of the old, he said, despite the fact that the majority "are self-sufficient, middle-class consumers with more assets than young couples and with both time and talent to offer society." His message to the news media: "We need more seasoned-and-elderly-correspondents."

At a retirement community in Rye, New York, seven women were honored at a tea for something in common: all were centenarians. Three came in wheelchairs, the others walked in on their own. A reporter who was present described them as "remarkable, amazing" and blessed with "good genes." Florence Adamson, the eldest at 103 and a widow for more than 40 years, plays Santa at the annual Christmas party. Younger residents in their 80s and 90s call her "Santy" year round. "I enjoy living here with nice ladies," she says. How does she define a lady? "Gentle, thoughtful and a good disposition."

Soprano Ruth Ann Swenson sings Monday

The Carmel Music Society concludes its 72nd season with a vocal recital by Ruth Ann Swenson, soprano. The program begins at 8 p.m. Monday, April 19 in Sunset Theater, San Carlos at Ninth, Carmel.

Ruth Ann Swenson has won critical acclaim internationally. She has sung at the Metropolitan Opera, San Francisco Opera, Opera National de Paris, Covent Garden, Berlin State Opera, Hamburg State Opera and many others.

She debuted at the Met in 1991 in "Don Giovanni" with James Levine conducting. A favorite artist of the San Francisco Opera since her professional debut there in 1983, she has returned to sing most of the important roles of her repertoire.

Ms. Swenson travels a hectic nine to 10 months a year and makes her home in the Napa Valley with her husband, fellow singer David Bernakus.

Monday's performance will feature works by Cavalli, Rossini, Bellini, Verdi, Mozart, Hahn, Bachelet, Duke, Rachmaninoff and Meyerbeer. Ms. Swenson will be accompanied on the Hamburg Steinway by Warren Jones.

Tickets are $45, $35 and $15. Call 625-9938 for ticket information.

A favorite on the world's great concert stages, Ruth Ann Swenson performs Monday in Carmel.

More than 600 species and varieties of Central California wildflowers are on display for the 38th Annual Wildflower Show.

The flowers, many at the height of their bloom, are exhibited at the Pacific Grove Museum of Natural History, Forest and Central avenues, Pacific Grove. Show hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday through Sunday, April 16-18.

For 38 years, the museum has worked with members of the Monterey Bay Chapter of the California Native Plant Society to put together this show. Native flowers are collected, labeled and displayed by volunteers.

Many volunteers will be available to answer questions about the assembled blooms.

A $1 donation is requested at the door. To learn more, call 648-3116.

THE BOOKSHELF

Big book festival welcomes authors and their fans

ATTENTION BIBLIOPHILISTS: Sunday, April 18 is a big day for booklovers: The third annual BookFestival will hold sway in 40 booths from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. at the Monterey Fairgrounds — and oh-so-many authors will be there ready to talk about and sign their latest books.

New, used and antiquarian books will be displayed and for sale by bibliopolists, and workshops, presentations and story telling — plus music and dancing — will take place. There will be food vendors and costumed children's book characters. Admission is $2 at the door, with children 12 and under admitted free.

The Monterey Bay Independent Booksellers Association, hosts of the event geared to the bibliophages among us, will be giving festival proceeds to Reading is Fundamental, more commonly known as RIF. RIF serves some 740 children in the Monterey Peninsula Unified School District with volunteers who help children sharpen reading and listening skills.

Wee ones will be able to meet their heroes in person, from Pooh Bear to Curious George.

So many authors, so little space . . .

A plethora of authors with a diversity of book themes will be on hand in individual booths to chat, sell, sign and promote their latest books — all published this year. Among them:

Belle Yang, Carmel author and illustrator of this, her first children's book, "Chili-Chili-Chin-Chin," tells a tale of a Manchurian boy and his impetuous donkey — all based on a Chinese story told to Belle by her father.

Larry Wilde, Carmelian authority on humor with 53 books to his credit, will not only sign his latest, "When You're Up to Your Eyeballs in Alligators," from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m., he also will conduct the first festival laughing contest at 11 a.m. Prizes will be awarded for the loudest, most infectious, most unusual, most uninhibited and the silliest laugh. A $100 gift certificate and free books are the prizes.

Larry Wilde

Iris Dart, Pebble Beach author who wrote "Beaches" and other novels, will be on hand from noon to 1:30 to sign and discuss "When I Fall in Love," which was released last month.

Howard Martin, co-author with Doc Childre and Donna Beech of "The HeartMath Solution," will be on hand from 1:30 to 2:15 p.m. for signing. The book, referred to by the publisher as a "breakthrough scientific approach" tells how to harness the power of the heart. The authors contend that immediate and proven benefits to physical and mental well-being can be achieved by following their easy-to-follow instructions.

Jerry Emory, who has written "The Monterey Bay Shoreline Guide," will not only sign his book, he'll narrate a slide presentation from 1:30 to 2:15 p.m. Emory's book includes information on exploring the shoreline by car and bike, investigating our outstanding Central Coast flora and fauna, and a history of coastal Indians, Spanish missionaries and Mexican rancheros.

Per Volquartz, Danish-American illustrator of Ruth Turk's book, "The Doll on the Top Shelf," will sign books from 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. and from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m. The beautifully illustrated book is printed in braille and text which allows sighted children to learn braille — and most importantly, allows unsighted persons to read stories to children too young to read. It's published by Owl's House Press.

By Margot Petit Nichols

Andrea Stryer will be at the festival at 3 p.m. with her new children's book, "The Celestial River: Creating Tales of the Milky Way" for 9 to 12-year-olds.

J.S. Holliday, Carmel resident, author, historian, retired professor, former director of the Oakland Museum and director emeritus of the California Historical Society, will be at the festival to introduce his latest book, "Rush for Riches," concerning the gold rush years and the transformation of California. See him from 12:30 to 1:15 p.m.

Mark Gurley will read from his book of blues poetry, "Salinas Blues," from 3 to 4 p.m. backed up by a blues band.

Vicki León, journalist and children's book author, will sign copies of her newest books, "A Rainbow of Songs," "A Pack of Wolves," and "Outrageous Women of the Renaissance" from 12:30 to 1:15 p.m. León has become a historical detective, searching out female achievers and then writing about them.

There will be many more authors and illustrators too numerous to mention here, so be sure to pick up your program schedule as you enter the fairgrounds. For information, call 375-1855 or 624-1803.

The BookFestival is the brainchild of six local independent bookstore operators concerned with the decline of independent neighborhood bookstores: Ann Congleton, Bay Books, Monterey; Mae Waldroup, Thunderbird Bookshop and Paul Fridlund of The Pilgrim's Way Bookstore, both in Carmel; Marcia Stearns of Bookmark, Ann Ostenso of Mulberry Bookshop, and Kathy Palermo of Bookworks, all in Pacific Grove.

Only those suffering from bibliophobia should stay away.

REMINDERS: Distinguished poet Lynn McMahon reads her poetry at 8 tonight, Friday, April 16 in room 14-B of Sunset Center (enter from Mission between Eighth and Tenth Avenues). No charge, courtesy of the Robinson Jeffers Tor House Foundation. Information: 624-1813.

AND those Bards of Bohemia, poets Taelen Thomas and Robert Campbell read their poetry at 8 p.m. both Friday and Saturday, April 16 and 17 in the Cherry Center theater, Carl Cherry Center for the Arts, Guadalupe at Fourth, Carmel. Admission of $10 includes tea and conversation with the poets following the readings. Information: 624-5380.

BOOKS INC. has started its own Carmel book club. Anyone interested in connecting with the newly formed group may do so by attending a 7 p.m. first meeting Wednesday, April 21 at Caffe Cardinale, Ocean Avenue between San Carlos and Dolores behind the "Fresh Produce" shop. Edgar-award winning mystery author Aaron Elkins (his latest is "Loot") will be on hand for a discussion — with coffee and dessert. For information, call 626-2095 or Kate Colby at 625-0440.

ROBERT FORTÉ will discuss his book, "Timothy Leary: Outside Looking In" at 7 p.m., Monday, April 19 at the Thunderbird Bookshop, Barnyard Shopping Village, Carmel. This is a free event. Information: call 624-1803.

It's official: Musical festival season has begun

THE LOCAL MUSIC festival season begins this weekend with two annual affairs, the Fourth Big Sur JazzFest (BSJF) and the sixth edition of the Monterey Seafood and Music Festival.

Returning home to Big Sur this year after 1998's El Niño-induced exodus to Monterey, the 1999 BSJF promises to be the best ever. Festival chairman Paul Vieregge is quick to point out the diversity of this year's lineup which includes the return of Roy Hargrove and Dave Ellis as well as an eclectic slate of newcomers.

Plugged In

By Stephen L. Vagnini

Local Big Sur favorites Just Friends will kick off the weekend festivities with a 4 p.m. show at Rocky Point Restaurant on Friday, April 16. The BSJF is more than just an annual concert and traditionally showcases entertainment at various south coast venues on Friday and Saturday evenings and then culminates with a grand finale at Pfeiffer Big Sur State Park on Sunday afternoon, April 18.

Friday night Cuban sensation Omar Sosa performs two shows at the River Inn (8 and 10 p.m). Sosa, a recent transplant to the San Francisco jazz scene, is known for is infectious brand of Afro-Cuban jazz. At the Sierra Mar at Post Ranch Inn, legendary guitarist Mundell Lowe appears Friday at 9 p.m. and at 7 p.m. saxophonist Virginia Mayhew performs at the Hawthorne Gallery across Highway 1 from Nepenthe. Saturday performances included r & b, jazz and funk singer Ledesi at Fernwood, pianist Mark Levine at Ventana and saxophonist Dave Ellis at the historic Nepenthe Restaurant.

A benefit for local Big Sur charities, the Sunday Grande Finale concert brings the above mentioned artists and headliners Roy Hargrove and Avishai Cohen together for a seven-hour performance in the heart of the Big Sur Valley.

Hargrove, the young trumpeter whose stature in the world of jazz continues to grow, has performed at two of the previous Big Sur JazzFests and his annual visit to Big Sur gives this ambitious undertaking instant caché.

Having received a Grammy award for his 1997 Cuban Habana album, Hargrove has established a strong connection with Cuban music following in the footsteps of the legendary Dizzy Gillespie.

Avishai Cohen, a double-bass player from Israel, recently toured with Chick Corea and makes his Big Sur debut performance and saxophonist Dave Ellis rounding out the impressive lineup. Ellis, a 1999 Bammie recipient, missed last year's event due to prior commitments (touring with members of the Grateful Dead) and his return adds another new dimension to this year's event. Ellis, a charter member of Charlie Hunter's seminal "acid jazz" band, is well-versed in a variety of styles and seeks to bring jazz to a broader audience.

"Where I'm at is playing jazz with a twist," says Ellis. "It's an ongoing quest for me to stretch the role of the saxophone in music."

Only 1,000 tickets are available for Sunday's concert and can be purchased at the BSJF web site at www.bigsurjazz.org of by calling (510) 601-TWEB. Do it soon.

Also held this weekend (April 17-18) — downtown Monterey presents the Sixth Annual Monterey Seafood & Music Festival with nonstop entertainment on two stages beginning Saturday morning at 10. The event is free and produced by the Old Monterey Business Association.

It features some of the best of Monterey Bay bands in blues, jazz, country western, rock 'n' roll, reggae and rockabilly. Performing at this year's event are blues bands John "Broadway" Tucker and Red Beans & Rice; country music groups Dakota and Lory Lynn; reggae bands Tony Miles and Jonah & the Whalewatchers and modern rock band Foamscape. Local jazz artist Daniel Krasner also performs. Out-of-town bands performing at this year's festival include San Jose harpist Jimmy Dewrance, Redwood City guitarist Terry Hiatt and Orange County funk rock band All Day Wire. Stages are located at the Custom House Plaza and at the west end of Alvarado Street.

Other festivals to soon follow include the Big Sur Blues Festival the weekend of May 1-2 at Fernwood, the Santa Cruz Blues Festival Memorial Day weekend at Aptos Park Village and of course the Monterey Jazz Festival the third weekend of September.

Blue Palm ushers in 'New Millennium'

THE ULTIMATE New Year's Eve is at hand — Dec. 31, 1999. Enter Blue Palm, described as a "postmodern Burns and Allen." Jackie Planeix and Tom Crocker (together they are Blue Palm) fuse humor, story and dance in their newest work, "The New Millennium." Show time is 8 p.m. Saturday, April 17 at Sunset Theater, Carmel. This is the second-to-last offering of this season's Performance Carmel.

Planeix and Crocker met at MUDRA (Brussels, Belgium), the interdisciplinary performing arts school created by controversial French choreographer Maurice Bejart. Upon graduation, Planeix and Crocker toured the world as soloists with the Bejart Ballet.

As Blue Palm, they perform and teach throughout North America and Europe.

Together, these dual nationals (French-American) examine the human comedy in a series of scenes set in various world locales on the night of Dec. 31, 1999. Their romantic and satirical tapestry of the Millennium travels from a birth in a New York elevator to a death in a Florida nursing home by way of a Morse Code office on the English channel, a Turkish mosque and the Mojave Desert.

Single tickets for Blue Palm are priced at $16 and $12.50.

Sunset Theater is on San Carlos at Ninth in downtown Carmel. For details or reservations, call 624-3996.

MMA presents Don Nice in Master Landscape Art Summer Class

SPACES ARE filling rapidly for a summer master landscape watercolor class presented by the Monterey Museum of Art's education department and taught by National Academy member Don Nice.

According to Cara Wilson, the museum's public relations coordinator, those wishing to study with Nice should reserve a place as soon as possible.

Classes will meet at 9 a.m. from Aug. 9 to 13 in the Buck Education Center, Monterey Museum of Art, 559 Pacific St., Monterey.

Nice, who has had innumerable one-man shows from 1963 to the present, and whose work is in many public collections — from the Whitney Museum of American Art, New York, to Arnhems Museum, Arnhems, Holland — has taught at such institutions as Santa Fe Institute of Fine Arts, Santa Fe, N.M., and Dartmouth College, Hanover, N.H., where he was an artist in residence.

A native Californian, Nice's first teaching position was at Monterey Peninsula College. He now resides in Garrison, N.Y. and is a member of the National Academy of Design.

Fees are $325 for museum members and $375 for others. For information or to reserve space, call the museum's education department at 373-2061.

Avashai Cohen Sextet
Sat. Apr. 17
Bassist & composer Avashai Cohen has quickly made a name for himself in the jazz world. The 27 year-old arrived in New York in 1992, and was soon playing with Joshua Redman, Roy Hargrove, Wynton Marsalis, and Pacquito D'Rivera. He then was hired by pianist Danilo Perez, and eventually came to be known to Chick Corea. Cohen's debut CD, Adama, features Corea on piano, and Cohen is currently working with Corea's new acoustic group called Origin. Cohen cites Jaco Pastorius as one of his biggest influences, and his own bass playing is rhythmically solid and soulful. Don't miss his exciting debut appearance at The Jazz & Blues Company.

Mario Flores Quintet
Wed. May 5
Mario Flores returns to the Jazz & Blues Company for a great evening of Latin and Afro-Cuban jazz. His appearance last July 4 was highly enjoyable, as conga player Flores and his band captivated the audience with their hot rhythms. Flores has been influenced by the music of Tito puente, Cal Tjader, Chano Pozo, and Mongo Santamaria. In over twenty years of playing music, Flores has performed with Pete Escovedo, Bobby McFerrin, Clare Fisher and others, and currently has released a CD called Chiltipin. Don't miss what is sure to be a wonderful ce;lebration of Cinco de Mayo.

Ron Escheté Trio
Sat. May 8
AND SPECIAL GUEST JAN DENAU – Guitarist Ron Escheté has been playing in the Los Angeles area for years. He has taught guitar at the Guitar Institute in Hollywood, and plays a seven-string guitar that enables him to play both melody and cords simultaneously. His most rcent recordings have been with the Gene Harris Quintet, vocalist Mary Stallings, and his own CD Mo' Strings Attached, available on the Jazz Alliance label. His long-time friend and local pianist Jan Denau will join Escheté. Denau plays regularly at Spanish Bay and the Monterey Hyatt, and stylistically is influenced by Errol Garner. This will no doubt be an evening of some tasty playing and classic jazz.

BUZZ SCHULTE LECTURE:

Carmel Valley before electricity, paved roads and modern schools

BERNARD H. (Buzz) SCHULTE grew up on his family's 60-acre pear orchard in Carmel Valley before there were any modern conveniences, such as electrical service or paved roads. School was a one-room schoolhouse.

Schulte survived these rigors and is alive to tell about them and about growing up in Carmel Valley. He will speak at a 7 p.m. lecture, Monday, April 19 in Carpenter Hall, Sunset Center, Mission between Eighth and 10th, Carmel.

Hosted by Carmel's Harrison Memorial Library, Schulte's talk is part of the 1999 Henry Meade Williams Local History Lecture Series. Admission is free.

No reservations are accepted for these well-attended presentations. Local History Room librarian Arlene Hess recommends early arrival. Call Arlene at 624-1615 with any questions.

What's Happening

PERFORMANCE

Presents CARMEL

BLUE PALM

"a postmodern Burns and Allen" in THE NEW MILLENNIUM

Blue Palm creates lean, witty dance comedy with impeccable deft social satire, skewering contemporary relationships and trends. Their provocative, neatly crafted dialogue, dance, and live music create a sophisticated, wacky, and bright series of scenes set in various world locals on New Year's Eve 1999. Part Noel Coward, part Nichols and May – a poignant and funny look at the quest for love at the dawn of the 21st century.

April in Paris celebrated on Peninsula turf

People and Places

By Sissi Maleki

IT DOESN'T take much reading to notice that our adult imagination is being increasingly forced to regress to elementary school levels. Remember those days when you had to spread your arms wide open to show how big the three-inch fish you caught had been? Or how you desperately tried to indicate — with your tightly squeezed fingers — the maximum amount of spinach that was acceptable on your dinner plate?

Fast forward to what you are now: an intelligent, well-educated, mature adult. And yet, the only way marketers think they'll impress you is by describing the size of something – as in movie theaters – in terms of "mega's". A megaplex. A megabyte. A megaton. You're really back where you were in first grade. Not quite sure HOW big "it" is supposed to be . . . only that it's BIG.

Or what about at the other end — the nano's: nanosecond, nanogram, and so on. I'm still waiting for the IRS to tell me my tax bill is a nanobill.

Actually, in my rarefied status as social columnist, I'm waiting to be invited to a mega-benefit. That's where no one (including the teetotalers) will quite know who all the beneficiaries are, how many guests attended, or what was eaten. And who knows, maybe the highlight will be a parade of models (males and females) dressed in nano-costumes . . .

ANY NON-PROFESSIONAL designer who can transform a generic banquet hall into a fantasy get-away dream deserves a very special award. And it just doesn't happen that often.

But at the "April in Paris" party jointly organized by Meals on Wheels and the Sunrise Rotary Club on April 10th, such a prize should have been given to Pat Miniaci, Floral Elegance's Suzanne Hayes and their worker bees. They truly pulled out all the stops in setting the stage for this seventh annual event. Clever lighting tricks, diverse props which included old-fashioned street lamps and elegant table decorations magically transported each guest "to Paris."

Interior designer Liz Lord, accompanied by hubby Skip, was one of the many guests who raved about the obvious design talent on show. As for Pat, she summed up the challenge very simply: "You have to have a vision of what it will look like." Trust board member Morley Brown to latch onto creative people!

Cy Fitton, with wife Jean, for once was free to enjoy himself. This 26-year Meals on Wheels volunteer is usually an indispensable handyman and driver for the group. That's, of course, on top of having served innumerable terms on the board, etc. and etc.

Party co-chair Kathie Kandler mentioned that the organization's goal of a $2 million endowment by the millennium is gradually looking pretty realistic, thanks to continued loyal support. Kathie's also been thrilled with the help they've received from the Sunrise Rotary Club each year to put on this Red and White Ball event. (Her co-chair this time was Rotarian Richard Flaig).

A truly terrific party and hats off again to the "set designers"!

■ Carmel Art Association honors artists

On April 9th, the Carmel Art Association presented a Director's Preview of artwork that included those of two artists who passed away last year – William Hannum and Helen Barker.

In fact, Hannum's mother, Helen, traveled from her residence in Southern California specifically to be present at this opening. Barbara Smith, a former volunteer at the association, caught my attention further when she mentioned that the Hannums were related to one of Carmel's most historically significant figures, writer Mary Austin.

In another room, a lively discussion was going on between Don and Priscilla Beadle and Pat Rosburg and Jacquie Frazier, all of whom were admiring the tile work of Kathleen Crocetti.

What a great job the association is doing to continue Carmel's artistic heritage!

EVER WONDER ABOUT THOSE RESTAURANT REVIEWS?

By MORGAN

WHAT IS IT that restaurant critics look for when evaluating a restaurant? And who made them God, anyway?

These are profound questions that we're asked frequently by readers and they're the same questions that appear, if we could only see them, in the balloon hovering over a restaurateur's head as an unfriendly review is scrutinized.

Other penetrating questions: How do you select or reject a restaurant for review? And who made you God, anyway?

Sloughing off that uncalled for, albeit frequently proffered testy question, let's go on to explain how we select or reject a restaurant for review:

Bear in mind that we live in a small, close community and that running a restaurant is probably the most valiant or foolhardy endeavor which anyone would choose to undertake, short of being forced to at gunpoint.

Remember, too, that a Carmel restaurateur has one hand tied behind his or her back because new sidewalk-side menu boxes are outlawed that would otherwise direct clientele to restaurants recessed in passageways or courtyards. And restaurant signs that would catch the eye with neon or other bright features on our dark and street-lightless byways are prohibited, also. Carmel-by-the-Sea's stringent menu box and signage ordinances are meant to keep our village, well, village-like, regardless of impact on business.

To write a deprecatory review in such a tiny enclave of a town and area would be to ring the death knell for a restaurant, if we may ascribe such Olympian influence to a newspaper critique.

To circumvent writing a negative column, this reviewer visits a restaurant at least twice — generally once at lunchtime and once at dinnertime. If both experiences have proved less than enthralling, we put the restaurant in a "hold" file. Then, after a few months have passed, we make a third visit. If all is still not well, we don't write a review.

It's been suggested — and perhaps rightly so — that this is not fair to the reader; that a critic should warn the general populace against a possible bad culinary experience. We always hold on to the hope that a restaurant may improve with time, and if it doesn't, it will soon close, anyway.

Now, on to the selection of a restaurant for review: Our readers are always curious about new restaurants, and some even wait for a review before venturing into the fledgling establishment. So do we. We think it only fair to give a restaurateur at least a month or two to work out the kinks (we hesitate to say "bugs" in connection with dining experiences) in ambiance, menu, cooking preparation, service and presentation.

It is only then that we enter — incognito and unbeknownst to the proprietor — and sample the wares, scrutinize the decor, lighting and comfort, note the service and manner in which the patron is treated, including which table the diner is assigned, the background music and the general atmosphere. This information, in our own form of shorthand, goes not onto the proverbial cuff, but into a concealed notebook.

After this initial survey, we try to go back one more time before deciding whether or not to write a review. It's at the conclusion of the second meal that we make an affirmative decision, then leave a business card with our signed credit card billing, and make a phantom departure.

On our business card the proprietor will find a personal note with compliments on an excellent evening and identifying ourselves as "Morgan." The owner or the chef de cuisine is asked to call the newsroom the next morning for a telephone interview. It's then that we elicit information about the preparation and ingredients of favorite dishes, the professional qualifications of the chef and other staff members, and the answers to questions that pique one's curiosity: Where is the fish obtained; what brand of coffee is used; who selects the wine? Where did you buy that unique table lamp? And so on.

With this arsenal of information, we then fire off the column.

A restaurant is rarely reviewed twice — given the number of restaurants in the immediate area — and chain restaurants, fast food establishments and coffee shops never.

For your information, here is an approximate breakdown of the 264 restaurants in our area: Carmel - 81; Monterey - 105; Pacific Grove - 46; Pebble Beach - 9; Carmel Valley - 17; and Big Sur - 6. Occasionally we may get over to Seaside and Marina when a reader recommends a restaurant or if we have heard through the grapevine of an outstanding dining place, but we usually stay within the six locations mentioned, which is our general circulation area.

Disagree with our reviews? Have a restaurant you would like to recommend for review? Readers are invited to contact this phantom reviewer at:

Morgan@carmelpinecone.com; Fax at 624-8076; or write to Morgan at The Carmel Pine Cone, P.O. Box G-1, Carmel-by-the-Sea, CA 93921.

Peabody Trio plays classical, contemporary program Sunday

WINNERS OF the Naumburg Chamber Music Award, the Peabody Trio will appear at 3 p.m. Sunday, April 18, in Carmel's Sunset Theater.

The trio has received acclaim for interpretations of music ranging from the works of Haydn to those of Shulamit Ran. Sunday's concert will feature compositions by Ran, Ravel and Beethoven. It is presented by Chamber Music Monterey Bay.

The Peabody Trio currently serves as the resident faculty ensemble of the Peabody Conservatory in Baltimore, a position they have held since 1989. The trio is composed of Violaine Melançon, violin; Thomas Kraines, cello, and Seth Knopp, piano.

The members have been very active in performing new music for piano trio, and with the Peabody Institute, have established a program which enables them to commission works from contemporary composers. To date, they have worked with Ran, Bright Sheng, Charles Wuorinen and Leon Kirchner, among others.

Tickets are available at Bookmark, Bay Books, the Thunderbird Bookshop and at the door. Tickets are $18 for adults and $7 for students.

COUNTRY ENGLISH ESTATE IN THE HEART OF PEBBLE BEACH

Only a short distance above The Lodge is this truly magnificent home in one of the finest neighborhoods in Pebble Beach. Built 14 years ago with demanding standards and marvelous details, this residence has both elegance of style and comfort in living. There are five bedrooms and 6 1/2 baths in the main residence and a self -contained guest house. High ceilings throughout, a dramatic two-story entry and living room, crown moldings and wide hallways are only a few of the touches that create a truly special home. Completing the property are wonderfully landscaped grounds and a private, gated entrance.

"Carmel Legends"
NO. 28

A curious character who keeps flitting in and out of early Carmel history is MARY AUSTIN. Well, perhaps "flit" is not quite the right verb for her activities, because she is described a "a dumpy little woman" who walked the beaches and let her long brown hair dangle to her shoulders. Instinctively we don't like her much, but we admire her independence and her success in competing with the macho men fronted by George Sterling and Jack London. In a time (1900-1915) when women were supposed to be seen and not heard, she was a worthy successor to Eve., Cleopatra, Queen Victoria, Carrie Chapman Catt, Florence Nightingale and the Carrie Nation. And possibly an inspiration to Gloria Steinem, Eleanor Roosevelt and Jane Fonda. She came to Carmel in 1905, already the author of a successful book, The Land of Little Rain. In Carmel, she finished her first novel, Isidro, polishing its phrases in a tree-house behind her home, which she called a "wick-i-up." She battled Sterling and London on even terms, hit home runs in the Abalone League, and wrote 35 verses for "The Abalone Song." Late in 1907, after less than 2 intense years in Carmel, she became convinced that she was terminally ill and moved to Italy to die. That didn't come off. She recovered and drifted back to Carmel through England and New York, arriving in 1913. She was always a storm center and departed finally in 1924 to Santa Fe where she ended her days.

CHS seniors spruce up Point Lobos Ranch one fine Tuesday

NINETY CARMEL High seniors rolled up their sleeves to plant trees, clear out intrusive weeds and dig out an old road by hand at their annual senior service day on Point Lobos Ranch April 13.

During the half-day event, the students worked with board members and staff from the Big Sur Land Trust on five different land restoration projects.

Some of the high school seniors yanked out huge stalks of French Broom that had been choking out native plants. Other groups planted dozens of willow trees along San Jose Creek.

Monastery Beach received a much needed spring cleaning as volunteers picked up cigarette butts, six pack rings and other debris. Monastery's birds and sea turtles will reap the rewards from the beach clean-up, said Nadene Torres, education coordinator with the land trust.

After four hours of hard work, the students were rewarded with a barbecue lunch, prepared by Merv Sutton of Nielsen's Market and other members of the Carmel-by-the-Sea Rotary Club.

"This is a great hands-on opportunity to make students of Carmel High aware of the environment and their responsibility toward it," said Zad Leavy, executive director of the land trust.

Snowy Plover workshop

THE FASCINATING Monterey Bay shorebird, the Western Snowy Plover, will be the subject of a free lecture and workshop April 24 given by State Parks Supervising Ranger Dave Dixon on the Western Snowy Plover Guardian Program.

The Western Snowy Plover returns each winter to nest at the same sites on local beaches. But there has recently been a dramatic decline in nesting success by the birds because of habitat loss, non-native predators, and increased competition with public recreational needs, the state parks department says.

The workshop will take place at 10 a.m. at the Monterey Beach Hotel (immediately west of Hwy One at the Canyon Del Rey exit in Seaside) and will include basic Snowy Plover biology and identification and an optional nest exclosure presentation.

Call 384-0617 or email to nbeaches@mbay.net to RSVP; walk-ins will also be welcomed.

The presentation is part of the Snowy Plover Guardian Program, an ongoing volunteer project developed to help facilitate cooperation between public recreational needs and Western Snowy Plover survival needs along the Monterey Bay and is sponsored by California State Parks, Point Reyes Bird Observatory, the Monterey Dunes Natural History Association, and the Monterey Beach Hotel.

REAL ESTATE

Land trust will get another piece of Carmel Point

A SMALL CORNER of the beach that once belonged to Carmel's celebrated poet, Robinson Jeffers, will soon have a new owner, the Big Sur Land Trust announced this week.

The land — part of a rocky promontory on the west side of Scenic Road just outside the Carmel-by-the-Sea city limits — is to be a gift to the land trust from the Tor House Foundation, a group dedicated to preserving Jeffers' cultural and literary legacy.

The parcel is not far from Jeffers' former home — Tor House and Hawk Tower, which the poet built with granite rocks hauled up from the beach — and is just around the bend from a small piece of Carmel Point that was bought by the land trust from the Kuster family in 1997.

Tor House Foundation trustees have approved the proposal, and the transfer will be publicly announced on Sunday, May 2, at the Tor House Annual Garden Party.

"Giving the property to the land trust is the best way to protect it, because they are in the business of preserving open space," Tor House official John Hicks said.

"The land trust is delighted about this transfer," says Zad Leavy, BSLT xecutive Director. "It seems true to Jeffers' life as a naturalist and a poet. First he left behind a legacy with his writing, and now through the combined efforts of the land trust and the foundation, he leaves this land for all to enjoy."

Most of the beach across Scenic Rd. from Tor House (upper right) is already in public hands. The Big Sur Land Trust will soon become owner of an additional small piece.

Appeal reveals a town with plenty of skylights

By TAMARA GRIPPI

A CARMEL couple who appealed to the city council April 6 for the right to keep seven skylights on their historic home surprised everyone at the meeting when they held up displays of 25 other historic homes in town that also have skylights.

Robert and Karen Miller's timing couldn't have been more appropriate. On the same evening that the council decided not to impose a moratorium on demolitions and exterior remodels of homes built before 1950, the Millers wondered out loud whether they were being held to an unfair standard for owning a 74-year-old home built by M.J. Murphy.

Their attorney, Tony Lombardo, told the council that the Millers hired a contractor to install a new roof with the series of skylights last August. The couple signed a contract stipulating that the roofer would apply for the proper permits, but he failed to do so, Lombardo said.

After the city discovered the illicit skylights, the Millers applied to the Carmel Planning Commission for the right to keep them. In February, the commission retroactively approved only two of the seven skylights and ordered that the rest be torn out.

The planning commission turned down the Millers request because commissioners felt the skylights were unnecessary, visually obtrusive and inconsistent with the historic home.

Lombardo, however, argued that as far as historic homes go, the Millers are in good company.

"We looked at the list of (historic) candidate homes in the city and approximately 50 percent of those have skylights," Lombardo said. "Mr. Murphy's original office has skylights facing the city streets," he said.

"I could paper the walls with these pictures," Karen Miller said as she showed house after house with skylights. "These photographs are taken from the street, just from driving by."

Lombardo also pointed out that while the Millers have owned their home for 25 years, they never received notice that the house was considered historic.

After looking at the Millers' poster boards of photos, the council decided to send the couple back to the planning commission. "If any new information is given that wasn't given to the decision making body, we normally refer the issue back," said Mayor Ken White.

Two of the seven skylights on this remodeled Dolores Street home can be seen from the street.

Others who spoke at the meeting urged the council to uphold the planning commission's decision. "There are windows on all sides of the house," said Melanie Billig, suggesting that the skylights are unnecessary.

"We need to send a strong message to contractors who don't come to the city for proper permits," Billig said.

make money from their proposed lot sales and additional golf course? Of course. They are a business and have a substantial investment in the land they own; few would suggest that an expectation of a return on their investment is unreasonable.

Are Forest residents' concerns over potential traffic and congestion impacts legitimate? Of course, these are genuine concerns in any community. The question of impacts, however, should not trigger an answer couched in abstract absolutes. Rather, again, a more objective, less impassioned standard of reasonableness would seem a better guiding light.

The Pebble Beach Company is proposing an 11% increase to the number of homes in the Forest; it is hard to argue that an increase of this level is excessive. Almost without exception, the future sites are of a size consistent with the immediately neighboring properties. It is always disheartening and hollow to hear a few current residents suggest that, now that they are already here, nobody else should have the opportunity to also build their home in the Forest.

The relocation of the equestrian center and construction of the new golf course also pose advantages and disadvantages. From a pure property value perspective, there is probably little argument that these changes will increase property values, particularly for those closest to the new golf course. Clearly there exists great demand for additional golf; given the integral nature of golf in the Pebble Beach community, it is difficult to conclude that the addition of this course is inherently unreasonable.

All things considered, the proposed project recommended as environmentally superior does not appear to be an unreasonable plan for the final residential development of the Forest. Given that, the Pebble Beach Company should be able to proceed; alternatively, interested residents should gather together to fairly purchase available properties for open space or other recreation uses.

'Set imaginations to higher standard'

Dear Editor:

With all due respect to its neighbors on Hatton Road, I say kudos to the Flander's Foundation for a thoughtful plan and significant contribution to Carmel. It is wonderful to see a group seeking a way to reach out to its community, while actively maintaining an important component of Carmel's colorful past.

One must pause to keep in proper perspective the scale of any event held at this location. The viability of the foundation's use and maintenance plans for a working museum must be contingent upon well planned, well organized, low-impact events. Those who continue to argue about using private facilities in our community for meetings and receptions underestimate both those who would use them and the need and opportunity to do something positive for our community.

It is unfortunate that we find such a proprietary lack of support for a plan calling to preserve and maintain one of the city's loveliest historic locations, while all over town homes are being remodeled, or simply demolished and rebuilt to maximum use. I would encourage everyone concerned with the impact of this project to take a moment to set your sights and imaginations to a higher standard. These aren't frat parties being planned. Rather, by its nature we'll find well-contained, intimate, social and cultural gatherings. Maintaining this historic venue through these means is brilliant. It is a gracious plan that supports community needs, and contributes to the overall preservation of our historical base.

Maggie Carey Lang,
Carmel Bridal Company, Carmel

'Single-family logical use for mansion'

Dear Editor:

In response to an article in the Carmel Resident's Association April newsletter regarding the controversial proposal by the Flanders Foundation, I feel a few comments are necessary. First, the house is on the periphery of the Mission Trail Nature Preserve, above the main network of trails, not "nestled in the preserve." It is not a part of the area traversed by most hikers.

The Lester Rowntree Native Plant Garden would not be cut off by the sale of the mansion, as one could see if looking at the survey map carefully prepared by the city staff in July. The ambiance and character of the arboretum would be in greater danger if the foundation is allowed to implement its plan of retreats, weddings, etc. The plan to shuttle guests, with a gated entry, would seriously impact the use of the arboretum to those who walk in the arboretum and the upper part of the park.

On March 1, neighbors were told by Melanie Billig that we could be impacted by noise if the mansion were sold, because the city would not be managing it. May I remind her, as I offered that night, that we have a sheriff's department which responds quickly to any complaints. Moreover, I find her comment ludicrous, considering that most of us have been managing our property and neighborhood for many, many years. This property is surrounded by county R-1 lots, serviced by county roads. The mansion is in the sphere of influence of the residents of Martin, Hatton and nearby roads. It is far removed from the environs of Carmel-by-the-Sea residents.

Clearly, the neighbors and the foundation are NOT "working together with a spirit of cooperation and compromise," as Melanie Billig stated. The foundation members are telling us that our objections are without merit, and that their plan will have little impact on us. We neighbors are strongly united in our objection to the foundation's plans, as the city council and Melanie Billig have been well informed. Single-family residence is the logical use for the mansion.

Planning commission approves two demolitions

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE CARMEL Planning Commission voted Wednesday to approve two demolitions in the village — a 1920s-era garage on Casanova Street, deemed historically "notable" by the Carmel Historic Survey — and a house on Lincoln built in 1925.

The Casanova house and its accompanying garage, though deemed notable, were given the designation without a reason indicated in the survey group's report, chairman Janice Fisher said. "It says it's notable, but gives absolutely no reason why it's notable."

Story poles show where one of two new houses will be built on Lincoln. An older home will be demolished to make way.

The apparently unusable garage is in such bad shape that the roof is "in a state of near collapse," according to owner Barbara Jones' application. Jones did not attend the hearing.

Planner Frank Barron told the commission, "Considering the dilapidated state of the structure . . . staff is recommending approval of the proposed demolition permit."

However, two members of the commission voiced concern over the lack of attempts to renovate the garage, rather than tear it down and install a concrete parking slab in its place, as the owner intends to do.

"It bothered me a little bit that apparently nobody has made an attempt to rehabilitate the structure," Commissioner Pope Cole-man said. "I don't think demolition will diminish the building, but it will significantly diminish the appearance of the street." Commissioner Frank Wasko agreed, but the commission voted three to two to approve the demolition.

Although the Lincoln house was built in 1925, and expanded in 1964, it has not been deemed historically significant. The demolition of the home, which currently occupies two lots, will open up the site for construction of two new homes.

Both new designs were approved by the commission. One house will have the maximum allowable floor area of 1,800 square feet and the maximum allowable height of 24 feet, while the other new house will be a little smaller than the maximum allowed.

I am the father of Roman Reed, who broke his neck playing college football four years ago, and became paralyzed from the shoulders down.

The doctors gave us no hope. "You'll never walk again, never close your fingers, never be able to father a child," our son was told. At first, it took two safety belts to keep him from sliding off the wheelchair. He literally could not lift his own hand.

But with the aid of advanced research, medication, and therapy, we were able to bring back the muscles on the backs of his arms. Now, instead of having to be picked up and carried, he can transfer himself from bed to chair — even drive an adapted truck.

Today Roman attends college at U.C. Berkeley, where he also works; and he is the father of a beautiful baby boy. Research helped him, and there is more help on the way.

Movie Superman Christopher Reeve said, in a personal letter to us, "One day Roman and I will stand up from our wheelchairs, and walk away from them forever."

Research is the answer to that great dream. AB 750, the Roman Reed Spinal Cord Injury Research bill, offers a painless way to permanently fund that research. Modeled after New York's unanimously-passed Richter Bill, AB 750 puts a $15 surcharge onto speeding tickets and other traffic violations. That money will go to spinal cord injury research for cure. Car crashes, by the way, are the number one cause of spinal cord injury.

Assembly Bill 750 just leaped over its first big hurdle. Sponsored by Assemblyman John Dutra, and co-authored by Senators John Burton and Liz Figueroa, AB 750 was approved by the California Assembly Health Committee on April 6. Next, our bill goes to the Appropriations Committee, and from there to the full body of the assembly itself.

Spinal cord injury costs California a mountain of medical bills: more than one billion dollars every year. The costs in human suffering cannot be measured.

Please ask Assemblyman Keeley to support AB 750, the Roman Reed Spinal Cord Injury Research Bill. Thank you.

Don Reed,
Fremont

POLICE LOG

Carmel Valley: Due to continued theft of newspapers at the entrance to Sleepy Hollow, dual doors were attached to a wooden enclosure housing newspaper slots. The individual responsible for the theft of newspapers each morning is believed to unscrewed the hinges of one door. Two of the screws were used to permanently attach the opposite door to the enclosure.

Carmel Valley: Man reported he was afraid someone he knew would get his nephews to beat him up. The caller said the person thought he was involved in a burglary. The person was contacted, who said he no longer believed the caller was involved in the burglary and that no one was after him.

Carmel Valley: Nason Road resident reported he was involved in a verbal argument with a woman who got upset and tore the phone line out of the wall. He did not wish to press charges.

Carmel Valley: Benicia resident reported she and six other students attempted to hike to Pine Valley. It began to snow, and five of the hikers returned to their vehicle. Two hikers continued on and did not return at the specified time. An area check was made and both hikers were found waiting at the trail head.

Carmel area: Woman reported she lost her check book, miscellaneous credit cards, and two checks payable to her at the Crossroads Safeway. She accidentally put the items in someone else's grocery bag.

TUESDAY, APRIL 6

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Abandoned vehicle owner advised to move it to driveway.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Son requested welfare check on his mother because she was not answering the phone. Mother was fine — her phone plug was disconnected.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report that a transient may be sleeping in or around a vacant rental home on Torres. Window found open and it appeared that someone used the bathroom. Some garbage was found in a container in the backyard that didn't belong to owner. Requested close patrol.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of a tree limb on a power line at Ocean and Santa Fe. PG&E requested to check the line.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Speeds of 40 mph and 42 mph in a 25 mph zone resulted in two citations on Atherton and 13th.

'We're thirsty . . . .'

Four beagles owned by Carmelian Hermann Meuller eagerly await a drink of water from Bruno's clerk Sharon Green Wednesday during a rare Carmel 'hot' spell — with temperatures in the mid-70s!

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Traffic stop on suspicious vehicle at Highway 1 and Carpenter. Driver was checked for warrants and reason for being downtown. All questions answered.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Traffic stop on suspicious vehicle at Ocean and Highway One. Driver was service related on business.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Home broken into and vandalized at Torres and 10th.

Carmel area: Yankee Point resident reported a female at his door. She was contacted and stated she was looking for her mother at her mother's old address and got no answer. She was cold so she knocked on the neighbor's door. She requested a ride back to Monterey and was given a ride.

Carmel Valley: Laguna Robles resident reported hearing noises at the outside rear of her house. Nothing seen, area check made, nothing found.

Carmel Valley: Woman reported receiving a call from an employee of a local surf shop informing her that someone was there trying to use her credit card. She believes she may have dropped it the previous evening at a Mid-Valley gas station.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 7

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Checked residence at Torres and 10th from prior trespass. Residence was secure.

Carmel area: Arriba del Mundo resident reported she is unable to locate her small wallet and contents. She last knew she had it on 3/29/99 at Del Monte Shopping Center in Monterey.

Carmel Valley: Illegal dumping reported at the Mid-Valley Shopping Center.

Carmel area: Pradera resident reported that she returned home to find a dog leash broken. She used the leash to tie her back gate closed.

Big Sur: U.S. Forest Service ranger at Pacific Valley received a report of a dog approximately 65'-75' down a cliff near the ocean. The dog was owned by a member of
